

Carousels allow components to cycle through elements these can be images or slides of text. Badges are used as part of links or buttons that use a counter. These can be found to count notifications. Tabs make the navigation bar links look like different tabs. Spinners can be used to show the loading state of your code which helps users understand the program is still working. Card creates a element that looks like an ad or boxing in the focus on something specific.

The bootstrap grid system allows for containers, rows, and columns to align content. Using bootstrap allows for easier customization and adjustment for different screens with less code.